

Download TV Shows - How to Download TV Shows Online

October 5th, 2010

Are you looking for away to download the latest TV shows on your PC? Maybe you’ve missed an episode of your favorite program? Or maybe you just want to start watching that new series all your friends have been talking about? If so, downloading TV shows from your computer is easy if you know where to look. But as with everything on the internet, there are a lot of scams and useless websites. But follow a few simple rules and you will find a great service to download TV shows from.

Firstly, you should try to avoid downloading TV shows from ‘torrent’ sites. Although it’s always tempting to download something for free, these sites are usually unregulated, so the files on them can be full of spyware and viruses. You can join a great paid site for a very small one time fee, which you can download TV shows from for the rest of your life.

Next, when searching for a service, check what they have available to download. The best websites out there will have more than 80 million files all available for you to download. Also look for a service which has Music, Movies and Games as well as TV shows so you can get the most out of the service you’re using.

Finally, you should make sure the site has a customer support service in case you have any problems or questions you need answering and that they have a money back guarantee. The better websites will have a 24/7 customer support service and up to a 6 week money back guarantee.

How to Download TV Shows For Free

September 29th, 2010

The Writers Strike isn’t showing any signs of ending, so now is a great time to catch up with some tv series that you may have missed. There’s a lot of tv shows that you can download for free. The trick is finding a great service that has every show that you are looking for.

There’s a variety of options available for downloading media. You can sign up with iTunes and download one episode at a time, paying usually about $1.99 for each download. Occasionally they have some shows that you can get for free and usually it will be the pilot episode of a series so you can check it out and see if it is a series you might be interested in watching. Then you can sign up for a subscription and new episodes will download automatically each time you fire up iTunes. They then can be transferred to your iPod or can just watch them on your computer.

Another alternative is Amazon’s UnBox service which works very similar to iTunes with pretty much the same pricing structure. You can pick and choose episodes to download if you are only looking for one or two shows that you missed. You can also usually download an entire season of a show. Amazon features movie downloads as well and one of the cool options with UnBox is that you can "rent" a movie to download. It sort of works like Pay Per View in that you will have a 24 hour viewing window to watch the movie and then after that it is locked out. Also, you can have Amazon Unbox items transferred to your TiVo and watch them on your tv.

For another option, there is Fast TV Downloads. Instead of paying per episode, you pay a single membership fee and download as many shows as you like. This works out better if there are a lot of shows you want to catch up with, where iTunes and Amazon work best if there's only a few episodes or shows that you missed. Also, with Fast TV Downloads you can burn the shows to DVD and play them in your normal DVD player. But you won't be able to transfer them to your TiVo. To transfer them to your iPod, would generally mean you'd need to convert the file to a different format, but it can be done. It just involves a couple of steps.

And finally, if you just don't want to take the time to download your tv shows, then you can watch them for free online at most of the network tv websites. At this point, nearly all of the broadcast companies run their shows online after they air, but you'll have to catch them quick because they usually only keep a few episodes online at any one time.

Watch Favorite Television Series in One Go With Satellite Broadband

September 13th, 2010

Nearly everybody likes to watch television every once and a while. Whether it's to get the weather or news, for educational purposes, to see some music videos, or for the sheer storytelling entertainment, sometimes it's nice to watch television. What many people discover however is that the suspense and gaps in the storytelling of many of their favorite series from week to week is not necessarily a pleasant experience. Once a person gets hooked on a series, he or she is likely to spend many hours not only watching, but thinking about, pondering, and researching the program while waiting for the answers as to what will happen. Excellent examples include mega-series like Lost and 24. For some, it is preferable to just wait around until all of the latest episodes have aired to watch them all at once, thereby sparing some of the torturous downtime between weekly episodes.

In order to accomplish this feat, it is necessary to remove oneself from any situation in which friends, colleagues or passersby might inadvertently spill the beans about what is going on in the series. If you find yourself in a situation where any one of these situations is unavoidable, it might be better to just watch the episodes as they come out so you can at least get some of the surprise and suspense. It will also be imperative to be able to download the episodes if you want the "avoidance" technique to work. This way, you'll have them all ready and waiting for you at the end of the season. If you don't have high speed internet already, you might want to look into signing up for a DSL, cable, or satellite internet broadband subscription ASAP. Lastly, you will need patience; the kind of Zen, eternal calm, infuriating patience that certainly does not pertain to the vast majority of pop culture fanatics. If you can somehow manage to create this perfect set of conditions, you may just have a shot of being able to watch your entire series in one go.

Of course, when it comes time to actually view the series, you'll have to set aside a block of time in which to watch all the episodes. With many series stretching between 10 and 20 episodes, this means basically devoting an entire weekend block of time to the series if you plan on eating, sleeping, or leaving the room. Ideally this block of time will be scheduled immediately before the finale airs so you can at least see the ending in real time. Going to all that trouble only to inadvertently find out the ending really would be a shame. This will mean turning off your cell phone, shutting down the satellite internet and television, and going into your own private cave for a few days. It may help to use the buddy system, and get one of your pals to go through the experience with you.

When you've got high speed internet, like satellite broadband, there's no need to wait around suffering wishing you could just get individual episodes of your favorite series. It's even possible to live stream shows right to your computer when you've got a broadband connection! See how the internet is improving TV today with satellite internet.

How to Watch 24 Episodes Online Over the Internet on Your PC

September 6th, 2010

The TV series 24 is one of the most popular television shows in the United States and in many parts of the world. Thousands of people tune in everyday to their favorite station to watch the show. The series has won an Emmy and Golden Globe awards and there are currently over one hundred episodes and a good number of seasons on top of the original six. Some of the characters on the show include Jack, Teri and Kim Bauer, Sherry and David Palmer, Nina Myers and Michelle Dessler.

No wonder thousands of people search the internet to find out ways that they can watch this television series online on their computer or laptop. There are many reasons why you may want to watch a TV episode on your pc. Some people find it more convenient because they can carry their laptop around and watch the show whenever they have time. They don't have to worry about rushing through traffic to get home after work and watch the show. Or may be you are away from home on some remote island but with an internet connection and computer but no TV. Some people just want to be able to do it for the heck of it. Whatever your reasons, here are some options that you may want to consider.

Option 1: From the website of the TV channel

Many TV stations have an online presence these days so the fastest way to find 24 episodes online is to visit the website of the TV station where you normally watch the show. If they don't show their programs online, try to check out other stations. All you have to do is visit the website and look for a link that says something about watching programs from the site. I have heard that some television stations charge for this service but there are lots of channels that do not charge for this service. If this does not work, consider option 2 below.

Option 2: Using PCTV or TV tuner cards

These have been around for a long time now although not everyone knows about them. Companies like Hauppauge have built their reputation on providing equipment that allows you to turn your pc into a normal TV. The downside to this is that you need some basic knowledge about adding stuff to your pc and installing a tuner card for example. It's not rocket science and many packages come with easy to follow instructions but some people find it extremely difficult to do it. If you're one of these people, try to ask a friend to do it for. If this option is out of the question for you, then take a look at option 3 below which does not require any additional equipment.

Option 3: Using software that allows you to watch local, national and international TV channels online

Many people don't know about this but there are many different channels that allow you to access their programs and watch the programs online for free. Some internet websites have set up web pages with lists of these channels where you can go and watch TV streams using Windows Media or the Realplayer. Remember 99.9% of the TV programs that are shown on American TV are also available on international and foreign channels. You just have to know how to access these TV streams and also which channels air these programs. So if you want to be able to watch 24 episodes online this may be a nice free way to watch the season or episodes that you are after. People are now doing this everywhere and lots of different websites and software are being created daily that enable people to be able to pick up TV streams from these free stations for free using their home computers and laptops.
